

By Electronic Mail

May 6, 2020

President Donald J. Trump
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Ave, NW
Washington, DC 20500

Dear President Trump:

America's critical infrastructure workers are on the front lines in the fight against COVID-19. Across the United States, doctors, nurses, food production and manufacturing employees, truckers, grocery store and retail clerks and many others are answering the call to keep their fellow Americans healthy and safe.

These efforts, though, hinge on America's supply chains. The complex networks connecting manufacturers, suppliers, transportation providers, retailers, and consumers are under unprecedented pressure to deliver essential goods and services. If those supply chains falter, so will the critical infrastructure industries they support, to the detriment of everyday Americans' well-being.

To meet this present need, we support the creation of a new White House Office of Supply Chain that could coordinate across agencies and liaise with the private sector to develop effective strategies and policies that secure U.S. supply chains. In the short term, this office could accelerate your COVID-19 response efforts through interagency collaboration and information-sharing, ensuring that efforts are not duplicative and appropriately prioritize addressing potential supply chain disruptions. For example, PPE scarcity not only poses risks in hospital and medical settings but could contribute to operational shutdowns in the food and chemical sectors, impacting other critical industries. Moreover, adequate worker health testing is surely going to put pressure on supply chains.

As a central government clearinghouse for supply chain issues, an Office of Supply Chain could provide strategic policy recommendations, ensure interagency coordination and alignment, provide a unifying voice for the Administration and be a resource for stakeholders to raise concerns. Supply chains stretch across the jurisdiction of multiple agencies, which means that no single government entity has ever fully prioritized them with an eye toward delivering competitiveness. Long-term, the Office of Supply Chain could fill this void, advancing an interconnected, holistic policy approach to strengthen the economy, address systemic vulnerabilities, and remove obstructions to innovation.

Consumer Brands Association

1001 19th Street North, 7th floor

Arlington, VA 22209

(571)378-6760

www.consumerbrandsassociation.org

When not faced with a global pandemic and its impact, the U.S. government has not traditionally prioritized supply chains or thought about them in an integrated way across different policy issue areas and relevant agencies. Supply chains are, in many respects, taken for granted until we need them the most. Urgent issues like PPE availability and maintaining critical infrastructure operations during a pandemic amplify their actual importance, prompting the need to align government decision-making and share expertise.

The establishment of a cross-functional Office of Supply Chain, led by the White House, would be an invaluable tool in protecting hard-working Americans and enhancing resiliency during our nation's recovery. The undersigned groups appreciate your leadership during these difficult times, and respectfully asks for your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

American Bakers Association
American Chemistry Council
American Cleaning Institute
American Feed Industry Association
Association of Equipment Manufacturers
Consumer Brands Association
Distilled Spirits Council of the U.S.
Fragrance Creators Association
International Bottled water Association
National Association of Beverage Importers
National Automatic Merchandising Association
National Confectioners Association
National Grocers Association
National Retail Federation
National Turkey Federation
North American Millers Association
North American Renderers Association
Pet Food Institute
United Fresh Produce Association
Wine and Spirits Wholesalers Association

Consumer Brands Association

1001 19th Street North, 7th floor

Arlington, VA 22209

(571)378-6760

www.consumerbrandsassociation.org